

Fighting Cardiovascular Disease

CARE Institute is a non-for-profit organisation with the sole purpose to advance medical research in cardiovascular medicine.

Despite the significant advances and the establishment of new treatments, cardiovascular diseases remain the main cause of morbidity and mortality in many countries. Thus, the need for more intense medical research in this field becomes vital, especially in communities, where the research contribution is disproportional to the prevalence of cardiovascular diseases.

The main mission of CARE Institute is the support of experimental and clinical research in cardiovascular diseases.

Means for accomplishing this mission are:

- a) The support of medical education, as well as the spread of information on scientific innovations in all fields of medical research, nationally and internationally.*
- b) The cooperation with other organisations that share the same visions.*
- c) The establishment of research institutions.*
- d) The provision of research grants in collaboration with funding sources, national and international, public or private.*

We visualize an international society with more preventive and therapeutic strategies against cardiovascular diseases and we hope that CARE Institute will contribute to this endeavour.

We look forward to collaborating with researchers sharing our vision.

Theofilos M Kolettis, MD, PhD
Chairman of the Board